583 [595] Marriage is monogamous. The wife is bought, in spite of the poverty of the Seri. Santa Blanco paid 150 pesos in property for his wife. Chico Romero, a widower, paid more for his, a widow, "because she had three daughters, and a family with daughters is rich" (in expectation of bride prices).

591 562 The wife goes to live with the husband. A young couple lives with the young man's parents, perhaps in an annex to the house. "The man commands." Chico was emphatic on this point, and repeated that when his son married he would live with him, not with the girl's relatives. Both he and Santo have step-sons-in-law as well as daughters-in-law living with them, but this is because they are chief and boat-owner respectively; (and the sons-in-law are young).

833 [843] Copulation was said to take place immediately on marriage. McGee's statement of a period of continence being cited as the custom of a foreign tribe, the informant obviously wondered and laughed. Intercourse goes on during pregnancy; but not for some months after birth, for fear of a new pregnancy, which would be injurious to the child. A good man respects his wife at all times and does not constantly pursue her.

144 164 No half-breeds were seen, and the Seri declare they are free of venereal disease.

551 614 Nothing could be elicited from the informant as to anything like the group-inherited names of lineages, or clans, of the Yuman tribes.

768 When a woman dies, the widower may give the children to his dead wife's parents to raise. This is the only item learned that might point to McGee's "matriarchate"; but the informant may have been thinking of particular cases. His son lives with him, though he lost the boy's mother.

582 Cross-cousin marriage is as prohibited as that of parallel-cousins. This is in accord with the sibling terminology for all cousins; but in view of the present small number of the tribe, the rule must work difficulty.

[587] A man does not marry his dead wife's sister. Apparently he may not. Nor is there levirate. The informant volunteered the question if marriage with step-daughters was permitted by other peoples. Being told of the Navaho custom, he seemed shocked.

606 183 Neither husband nor wife looks at or addresses either parent-in-law. In the isolated, small-group life of the Seri, this rule can hardly be adhered to with complete rigor, and its conspicuous carrying out was not observed; but then everything in their behavior is casual, informal, and slovenly.

607 The kinship system as recorded contains a note as to a woman not addressing her younger sister's husband by kinship term except 789 Some shamans display their ability to hold live coals in their mouth.

Taboos

[88] 784 At first menstruation, the girl eats nothing (!) for 8 days, only drinking water. For 4 nights a fiesta is held for her, men and women dancing in a circle, anti-sunwise. She is outside the ring. Her head is not covered. San-pit roasting was unknown to the informant.

[841] At menstruation a woman drinks hot water. She may cook for others. She may not eat deer meat.

[844] After childbirth, both husband and wife eat only atole (gruel) and water, he for 4, she for 8 days. She may not work at all, he only a little, such as getting wood, "hunting" as necessary, etc.

[81] There is no puberty ceremony for boys. Nothing is said to be [224] known of any rule forbidding a boy to eat of the first game killed by him.

[833] Continence before hunting deer was not observed. Nor was there any special treatment or respect due the deer carcass. It is said that deer meat could not be left behind unless there was too much, but this is probably a statement of practise rather than a taboo.

Dances

535 [727] Besides the girl's puberty dance, the Seri also had a scalp dance. Only the frontal piece of the scalp was used. This was hung on a pole. Men (armed) and women danced together around it. If the scalp fell down, all would die.

Dances seen were solo on a plank laid over a shallow pit. Several singers sat by, beating or rattling anything convenient. Each song and dance lasted scarcely three minutes. The tempo is fast. The step is a quick double shuffle with alternate feet. In one type, the dancer held to a stick with one hand, his body and hanging arm remaining as motionless as possible. Another type was without the stick, the dancer holding a gourd rattle and keeping his body bent forward somewhat.

534 171 Rattles are of gourds, e'Xèc, on a stick, or of cocoons, Xekakë'ntta. Deer-hoof rattles were denied. The cocoons are on a band worn below the knee. The Yaqui-Mayo wear such knee-bands of cocoons; and sometimes of deer-hoofs. The Gila Pima also know the cocoon band.

Various Religious Items

276 Datura (toloache, jimsonweed) does not appear to have been used. Even the plant seems unknown, although it is said to occur in the Seri range.

778 789 Rain making seems to be by amulet rather than by direct shamanistic power. For instance, Antonio Herrera wears a small object ing, because it would be swamped in a sea which it could resist. The joining and calking are always carried far enough that the boat can be bailed faster than it leaks. That the Seri prefer to bail rather than to finick over joints, is a matter of preference. Most of our real frontier life runs on much the same plan, though sprung from a tradition of intrinsic standard and provided with a superior tool equipment. Tribes like the Walapai and Papago, who live in nearly the same desert, show much of the Seri combination of technological crudeness and effectiveness. They do make an exception in basketry, which is what has chiefly reached our museum cases from their culture; but the Davis-Heye collection shows that the Seri too can make baskets of unsuspected quality. My impression, based on the way the Seri handle their knives, boats, bows, and the like, is that they have excellent practical mechanical sense, but that their standards are astonishingly different from our own. Most people that depended so much on sailing their boats as the modern Seri do, would not be content with two sticks, a blanket, and a harpoon line. But, given the willingness to operate with this equipment, very few would be as successful in quickly rigging and skilfully handling the sail. And sailing is something the Seri have recently learned or evolved. They are the frontiersmen of native culture: hardy, rude, unorganized, practical, efficient; but, like our own frontiersmen, in no sense only half emerged from the tool-less animal. McGee was so inspired by the desire to find ultimate "primitiveness" among the Seri that he often ignored the tremendous effect of their habitat which he so well observed and described. After all, in his day cultural evolutionism was still in vogue.

As to race sense, McGee seems partly but only partly right. Chico Romero of his own accord asked me if other Indians had venereal diseases, and on the return question replied that the Seri were entirely free from them. I also saw and heard of no half-breeds. On the other hand, Chico's historical tradition told of the violation and keeping of captive Tepoca women, and since his own son was descended from one of them, in the second generation, Chico's mother-in-law must have been a Tepoca. McGee's "alien conjugal union" as the "blackest crime" (p. 11) is therefore an exaggeration, and his informant's statement that a Papago woman captive among the Seri never could have had children because she was an alien slave (p. 278), must rest upon a misunderstanding.

The groom's continence for a year after marriage as a moral test before admission to full husbandly status (pp. 280-3), is probably a matriarchally colored fantasy based on another misunderstanding. As already mentioned, Chico was interested, but mildly ribaldly amused; at the idea when it was put before him as a foreign Indian custom. He reacted like the average white man under the circumstances, not in the least like an actor skilfully feigning ignorance.

Soon two little boys joined the dance, stepping up and down in the sand. Lighted only by the flickering flames of the driftwood fires on the shores of this mysterious and dreaded isle, the soft murmur of the sea as a refrain to the wild chanting, the weird circling of glittering eyes, and wild dark faces, presented a scene of uncanny and savage fascination witnessed by white men probably for the first time.

After each stanza there was a short rest. The singing was similar to most other tribal chanting.

Bob made the remark that the girl was old enough to be broken in by the old Chief. I said, "How?"

He said, when a girl thirteen or fourteen has her menses, the Chief takes her and goes through the family act. This is called 'breaking her in'. She is then eligible for marriage. A young man desiring marriage has to purchase the girl by giving the father a boat or rifle, both being necessary to the Seri's existence and protection. At the wedding they have sort of a fiesta and much mescal is drunk, which properly solemnizes a wedding.

When a girl has a baby it usually comes very naturally and easily, but I remember one girl's first baby was three days in coming, and she suffered a great deal. This was on a subsequent trip. She was staying with many of her people on the mainland and someone asked them if they didn't want a doctor or other help. They said: No, they had one. It was a Medicine Man who chanted over the girl and dug hollows in the sand to fit her heels into. He said that the legs had to be kept apart. This was all he did. But ordinarily there is no trouble, and if a baby is born at noon the mother is up and doing, and cooks supper for her lord and master. The men treat their wives with kindness and each shares with the other any delicacy.

In Seriland domestic duties are reversed from the usual Indian methods. The men get the water and the women get the wood. This consists mostly of driftwood gathered along the shore, and it is a picturesque sight to see a string of women and girls bringing in loads of wood in baskets on their heads at sunset.

There are no plural marriages, but sometimes when a Chief is old, or rather when his wife is old and can have no more babies, he can take a younger woman as his wife. The present Chief is getting old now, almost too old to break in the girls, so they may get a younger man. This might be called the perquisites of office. He takes the cream.

They hunt lice in the head and eat them. This is said to increase the amorous desires. The penis of the male turtle is cut out and dried. This is pounded and pulverized and placed in the food of the women. This is said to create a desire for a man and the family act.
